Synopsis	:	The course will introduce participants to Computer Assisted Language Learning (CALL) topics such as, the history and development of CALL, Network-based Language Teaching (NBLT), and research in CALL/ICT. Through reading of research articles in CALL, classroom discussions and lectures, participants will be given hands-on experience of using and building simple lesson plans using CALL to be used with their students. Specifically, participants will have the opportunity to design their own online resource by linking to other websites and creating their language activities based on a selected syllabus; critically review and evaluate the quality and the usefulness of the language learning software/courseware and language learning websites/portals and integrate CALL into their classroom teaching.
