Synopsis : This course introduces students to the grammar and description of English which in this course refers to the study and description of rules at clause, sentence and to a certain extent, textual level. It discusses syntax and to some extent, semantics. This course also looks at the different analyses offered by different models of description of grammar (English) and students are expected to be able to apply these to new data. The course also provides students with the opportunity to investigate and discuss the application of such grammatical models to current practice in language learning and teaching, materials preparation, testing and evaluation, course and syllabus design.
